Core Themes in Millard Erickson's Christian Doctrine

Erickson's systematic theology addresses a broad spectrum of doctrinal topics. These are often organized into a comprehensive framework that reflects both biblical teachings and philosophical reflection.

1. The Authority and Inspiration of Scripture

Biblical Authority

Erickson affirms the Bible as the ultimate authority in Christian life and doctrine. He emphasizes that Scripture is inspired by the Holy Spirit, making it infallible and authoritative for faith and practice.

Inspiration and Inerrancy

He argues for the inerrancy of Scripture, asserting that the Bible, in its original manuscripts, is free from error in all that it teaches. Erickson's understanding of inspiration is both verbal (the words are inspired) and plenary (all parts are equally inspired).

Implications for Doctrine

This foundational view underpins all subsequent doctrinal formulations, anchoring Erickson's theology in the authority of divine revelation.

Definition and Significance

Erickson considers the doctrine of the Trinity as essential to understanding Christian theism. It affirms one God in three persons: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Biblical Foundations

He emphasizes that the Trinity is implicitly present throughout Scripture, with explicit formulations emerging from the early ecumenical councils. Erickson stresses the importance of affirming both the unity of God and the distinguishability of the persons.

Analytical Approach

He employs philosophical reasoning to defend the coherence of the Trinity, addressing common objections and clarifying distinctions between divine persons and divine essence.

3. The Person and Work of Jesus Christ

Christ's Divinity and Humanity

Erickson affirms the dual nature of Christ—fully divine and fully human—without confusion or separation. This doctrine is vital for understanding salvation.

Atonement Theories

He explores various models of atonement, including the satisfaction, Christus Victor, and moral influence theories, ultimately emphasizing the sufficiency and necessity of Christ's death for salvation.

Resurrection and Ascension

The physical resurrection and ascension affirm Christ's victory over death and his ongoing intercession, critical for Christian hope.

4. Salvation: Grace, Faith, and Regeneration

Soteriological Framework

Erickson emphasizes salvation as a divine initiative, rooted in grace. Human response involves faith, which is enabled by the Holy Spirit.

Justification and Sanctification

He distinguishes between justification—being declared righteous by faith—and sanctification—the process of becoming holy. Both are integral to the believer's spiritual journey.

Security of Believers

Erickson advocates for the perseverance of saints, asserting that true believers are secure in Christ, though ongoing faith and obedience are necessary.

5. The Holy Spirit's Role

Conviction, Regeneration, and Empowerment

The Holy Spirit convicts individuals of sin, regenerates believers, and empowers them for service and holy living.
